Fete held in aid of underprivileged children

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, Nov 15 – Cambridge School, Guwahati, the first and the only international school of the north-eastern region, affiliated to the University of Cambridge, organised Hope – 2011, a fete in aid of underprivileged children.

The fete, organised on the eve of Children's Day – on November 13, offered various food and games stalls run by the teachers and staff of the school. There was also a special charity enclosure where the visitors could donate old clothes; educational stationeries among other things, which, along with all proceeds from the fair were donated to various orphanages and children's homes in and around the city, a statement mentioned.

While inaugurating the fair, Chiranjit Chaliha, president of the school advisory body, lauded Cambridge School for its noble effort of celebrating Children's Day in the best way possible by bringing smiles on the faces of underprivileged children.

The principal and the director of the school emphasized the fact that education as per the international curriculum was not confined to academic achievements alone.

Other than the food and games stalls, visitors were treated to various song and dance items. Other notable inclusions were a magic show by Anuj Das and an open quiz conducted by the noted quiz master Sailen Baishya.
